More Productivity For More Pay Held Answer to Strikes

NEW YORK. — Strikes can be stopped, according to Lewis S. Rosenstiel, if labor and business make a basic bargain at once of more pay for more productivity.

Rosenstiel, who is chairman of Schenley Industries, says:

"In the more than four years since V-J day, strikes have cost us six billion dollars. What we need now—what would help the whole country—is a five-year moratorium on strikes."

This is the simple swap, between labor and business, that Rosenstiel urges to end industrial disputes for the next five years:

1. For labor—a 5 per cent wage increase each year;

2. For business—a 4 per cent annual increase in labor's man-hour productivity.

The executive regards what he proposes as an old-fashioned horse trade, with firm matter inventories for the both sides in the U. S. production picture. And he ought to know since his company employs approximately 12,000 persons and has one of the "cleanest" labor records in the country.

It has more than 100 contracts currently in effect covering plants in nearly two score communities throughout the country and has had "practically no lost time because of labor disputes."

Besides eliminating labor - business discord, his proposal will provide continued prosperity for the nation, Rosenstiel says.

"The wage increase will put 47 million dollars more in employees' pay envelopes in 1954," he says, "and that is more than one-third increase in the standard of living. Naturally, greater productivity and heightened consumer activity will provide the nation with a healthy, expanding economy, an economic climate that is always good for businessmen."

According to Rosenstiel, the U.S. national income should reach 309 billion by 1954, 33 per cent increase over the 1946 income of 226 billion dollars.

Life Expectancy Greatest In U.S., Survey Discloses

NEW YORK.—Is it true that life expectancy in the United States is greater for foreigners living here than it would be in their own homes?

There is strong evidence that this is the case, according to Dr. Frank G. Dickinson, economist and statistician of the American Medical association.

He says Swedes live longer in Minnesota than in Sweden and that there is equally strong proof that Norwegians live longer in South Dakota than in Norway, and that there is considerable evidence that Mexicans live longer in New Mexico than in Mexico.

Dickinson made the comparisons by the way of upholding the thesis that the United States is the healthiest nation in the world. He says statistics prove life longer here than anywhere else among the large nations, explaining this meant nations with more than 10 million population.

Lad of Five Takes Cab Home After Tiring of Long Walk

MARQUETTE, MICH. — Donald Messier is becoming a little annoyed at his precocious son.

Late one afternoon as Messier drove into Marquette to pay a bill, he told his five-year old son, Tom, to wait in the car while he went into the building.

When Messier came out, he couldn't find Tommy. The frantic father drove to several places in Marquette where he thought his son possibly might be, and called police to join in the search.

About 8 p. m., after three hours of fruitless searching, he decided to return home and break the bad news to his wife, Amelia. When he opened the door he saw Tommy comfortably seated in the living room with the rest of the family.

It seemed Tommy had gotten tired of waiting for his dad, and had taken a cab home.

British to Test Endurance Of Sailors in Cold Weather

LONDON.—The British admiralty plans to set a group of sailors afloat for three to five days in small life rafts in Arctic gales to test ability of men to survive in wintry seas.

Six to 10 men were to set out in new type naval life floats during an Arctic gale with air temperatures of 14 to five degrees.

Wearing survivors' suits, the men will be exposed twice to the below-freezing weather for periods of from three to five days. They will be given two sets of rations—one a complete, 3,000 calory diet; the other a minimum of 1,500 calories, including toffee, dehydrated fruit block, biscuits and condensed sweet milk.

Each man will be given about one pint of water daily, but the admiralty hadn't decided whether the water would be carried in tins, or converted from sea water.

Steno Writes Sky-Ad Letters Two Miles High

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — It's a stenographer's business, of course, to write letters—but when one writes letters in the sky which are one mile wide and two miles high, that certainly should entitle one to a designation as a unique stenographer.

Betty Pettitt is the stenographer who writes those huge letters in the sky. The trim, brown-eyed pilot-secretary is the only skywriter in Indianapolis and, she believes, the only woman skywriter in the business.

A 35-year-old brunet, Betty's entire aerial career has been happenstance. Born in the Adirondacks, near Saranac Lake, N. Y., Betty loved the sky and admired women fliers. But she had spent seven years helping a music foundation in Newark, N. J., before she went overboard for flying.

One of her two sisters got her a pass on a flight to Montreal. That did it. Betty started pilot's training, got a commission in 1943 and enlisted as a women's air force service pilot the following February. After that, she tested Service. ### Notice To Taxpayers and Citizens of Appomattox County

The Board of Supervisors and the County School Board are facing a difficult problem in securing sufficient funds to construct an adequate building for the colored school at Appomattox. This building has been badly crowded for sometime dismainly to a fire which occurred several years ago.

As the result of an Act of the Legislature of Virginia which was passed on February 6, Appomattox will receive approximately $150,000 from the State which may be used on the construction of this colored school. This, however, lacks $100,000. of being enough money to construct the building according to architect's estimates of the cost.

This money may be borrowed from the State Literary Loan Fund over a period of thirty years at 2% which would cost the county about $5,330.00 a year to pay back. It is believed that this loan can be carried and retired without any increase in taxes based on the present tax levies.

It is also probable that Governor Battle will recommend an additional fifteen million a year for two more years for school construction out of which Appomattox County would receive an additional $100,000.00 which would be enough to pay off the loan within four years from now. It is possible, of course, that this map not happen.

These are the matters that we would like to discuss with you and therefore the Board of Supervisors has called a mass meeting of taxpayers and citizens of Appomattox County to be held at the Court House at Appomattox at 10:00 o'clock A. M., Wednesday, February 22. It is hoped and urged that there will be a large attendance so that a full and frank discussion may be received from the people.

Car Robe Collection Starts After Autoist Finds They're Rare

DELAVAN, WIS.—In 1922, Carl S. Ramsey decided he ought to have a car robe, inasmuch as he had purchased a car. So he began to search around in many places in order to get just what he wanted. But all those in stock were dark, drab, colorless affairs. Ramsey wanted something "flashy."

He could remember when the roads around here were used by Chicago millionaires and their ladies driving in fancy carriages drawn by sleek horses. Each of these buggies, he recalled, was equipped with lap robes—and those robes were something! Some were of red plush with pictures of horses. Some had tigers reclining in beds of roses. That, Ramsey decided, was just what he wanted.

He bought his first robe at an auction at Beloit. Then he found out that such robes were not being made any more. So, in case his first robe wore out, Ramsey looked about and bought a second one. Soon he had 10, then a dozen. Now he has 66 stored in eight steelhball-packed trunks. There isn't a one in his car.

He says he isn't finished yet. Now he thinks he'd like to have 100, then he'd quit collecting lap robes and give the whole kit and caboodle to a museum.

Meanwhile, he drives around the southern part of the state paying particular attention to wash lines. When he sees a carriage robe airing on the line, Ramsey stops to dicker. He has paid from $2.50 to $25 for an old robe.

He explains: "Too many people collect stamps. That's no fun — it costs too much and it takes too much brainwork. Beer mugs the same way.

"It's different with lap robes . . ."

Baby Girl Survives After Lung Collapse From Inhaled Bean

CHICAGO, ILL.—A 14-month-old girl whose lung collapsed when a bean lodged in it, is recovering after a 107-mile race in which her ambulance burned out its motor, attendants forgot all important X-ray plates and her supply of oxygen ran out.

The chain of incidents was set off when a common navy bean fell off a shelf in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Airgood at Berrien Center, Mich.

Their daughter, Patsy Ann, found the bean and put it in her mouth. Then she inhaled it into her right bronchial tube. By the next day the bean had swelled with moisture to the size of an apricot. It blocked off her breathing passage and collapsed her right lung.

Soon she began turning blue and an X-ray showed she was likely to die. A doctor recommended that she be taken to Chicago as quickly as possible.

Undertaker Francis A. Bowerman, of Eau Claire, Mich., volunteered to drive her in his ambulance. The Airgoods accompanied him and the X-ray plates were stowed in the glove compartment. Scores of officers in Michigan and Indiana kept track of the ambulance by radio.

At Gary, Ind., the ambulance's motor burned out. Officers quickly transferred Patsy Ann to another ambulance. But they and the attendants forgot the X-ray plates until the ambulance was out of town. Bowerman was driven back in a police car to pick up the plates.

Meanwhile, the second ambulance's supply of oxygen, necessary to keep Patsy Ann alive, ran out. East Chicago firemen heard of the situation by radio. An inhalator squad intercepted the ambulance and supplied a new tank. That was where Bowerman, carrying the X-ray plates, caught up with the ambulance.

Chicago police took over the escort job at the city limits and the ambulance tore through the main business district with sirens screaming.

Arriving at Children's Memorial hospital, officers took the girl directly to the operating room, where surgeons performed a bronchoscopic operation within minutes and removed the bean.

Hospital officials Thursday said the girl was "resting fine" and that her condition was "much improved," although still critical.

Cairo Typist Seeks World Championship As Heaviest Eater

CAIRO. — Mohammed, the "muncher" is out for a world's title—he would like to be the champion eater of the entire hemisphere.

His full name is Mohammed Riad, an Egyptian typist, who is now down to an eating weight of 225 pounds.

In competitive eating, to vie for the world's singles, two-handed eating title, the contestant must include hardboiled eggs. However, they may be shelled first, the rules say.

According to the best information on the subject, the present world record for hardboiled egg consumption is held by an American who put away 60 eggs in 30 minutes.

So far Mohammed's single weakness—hunger—has kept the title just a dozen eggs out of his reach.

He made a title attempt only a few weeks ago. But listen to Riad's sad story:

"While I was waiting for the judges to arrive, I went to wash my hands and found a large piece of chocolate in my pocket. One of my fans had put it there and I really am not used to it.

"Believe me, this was the cause of my failure. Also, I ate a large bowl of pea soup before the contest. This was a mistake, too.

"I am ashamed to say I ate only 43 eggs and drank two bottles of soft drinks in 23 minutes."

One of the hazards of the sport, a sharp pain in the region of the stomach, puts him out of play at that juncture. He turned pea green and bolted from the room.

"Now I am training for a new championship attempt," Riad said, "I absolutely will eat 100 eggs for a sensational new record. My honor is at stake.

"Also, I am thinking about changing my technique. Do you think I made a mistake in swallowing each egg into red pepper first?"

Sicilian Takes Big Fortune From Salt Water Annually

TRAPANI, SICILY.—Many are the schemes and dreams of taking treasure out of the sea—but there is one man who is making the ocean provide him with a fortune.

He is Rocco Ricevuto, owner and manager of the Trapani salt marshes from which he is taking about one million dollars a year. The marshes yield about 200,000 tons of salt annually for which Ricevuto receives an average of $5 a ton.

Water from the salt - laden Mediterranean is pumped into drying basins where the hot Italian sun evaporates the water and leaves the salt in a growing pile.

In 1943 fleeing Germans destroyed all the plants in the salt marshes "because they could have been of use to the American troops." Ricevuto said he still wonders how the Americans could have used the salt marsh plants for war purposes.

"Destruction was carefully planned and faithfully carried out," Ricevuto said. "When I came back after the Nazi-Fascists evacuated Trapani, I found nothing remained of the plants my father had built with loving care through 50 years of hard work.

"For a year I came here every morning, and studied how much of the rubble could be salvaged.

"One day, that was in 1947, I decided that I must do something to make the plants work again. I always had a dream of more than 500 men working in the salt marshes. I called them to a big meeting in the place where the old silos were built and asked them to help me out.

"In two years I got my plants running again.

"Little by little we recovered our business. Ships come here now at an average of one every week or two, loading salt for eastern and northern countries.

"Trapani's salt is good for industrial use, so Norwegians and Japanese come here to buy it.

"After years of loading the ships by hand, with men carrying the heavy baskets of salt on their shoulders, I now have my new chain system rolling again."
